What to expect

- There is a small chance of travel delays on roads with some stranded vehicles and passengers, along with delayed or cancelled rail and air travel

Further details

A spell of heavy rain may affect parts of southeast England during the early hours of Monday morning, lasting into the morning travel period before clearing eastwards. 10–20 mm of rain is expected in places, and there is a risk of this turning to snow before clearing. There is large uncertainty as to whether it will snow, but if it does, a few places may see 2–5 cm accumulating above 100 m in a fairly short period. This may lead to difficult travel conditions and some disruption.

 Very low likelihood of medium impacts
